

Guidelines for Nomination for the Sixth (2024) NIHU International Prize in Japanese Studies

Changes from the Fifth (2023) nomination guidelines

The maximum number of nominees (one) has been revised to no maximum.

The conditions for recommendation from worldwide universities (agreement with an inter-university research institute within NIHU) have been abolished.

The description of the recommendation documents has been simplified.

1. Objective

The Inter-University Research Institute Corporation National Institutes for the Humanities (hereinafter, “NIHU”) established the NIHU International Prize in Japanese Studies in January 2019 with cooperation from the Kuraray Foundation. This award is aimed at not only promoting the international development of Japanese studies, but also deepening and boosting the comprehension of Japan in academia.

The prize is awarded to a researcher based outside of Japan who has achieved outstanding academic achievements in Japanese philosophy, religion, thought, art, literature, language, history, folklore, society, environment, and other fields in the Humanities, and who has made a significant contribution to the international development of Japanese studies, and honors his/her performance.

2. Eligible fields

The prize is awarded to studies in fields related to Japan and the humanities, including philosophy, religion, thought, art, literature, language, history, folklore, society, and environmental studies.

3. Number of laureates: 1

The laureate of the prize will be presented with a certificate of merit, a trophy, and a cash prize of 20,000 U.S. dollars.

The laureate will also be invited to the presentation ceremony to be held in Japan (planned around December 2024) and a commemorative lecture meeting will also be held.

Round-trip airfare to and from Japan will also be provided for the laureate and his/her partner, with an additional 500,000 yen for the cost of two persons' stay in Japan.

4. Eligible persons

1) The prize is granted to a researcher based outside of Japan who has greatly contributed to the international development of Japanese studies by making an outstanding academic achievement in one of the eligible fields shown in Section 2.

*In addition to researchers residing outside of Japan, eligible persons also include those who have a track record in research activities based outside of Japan.

*No restrictions according to nationality.

2) Persons who were nominated for the prize in the past remain eligible for three years (three times including the one when they were nominated), in principle.

5. Right to nominate

Nominations for the award are accepted from the heads of organizations related to humanities research listed below. There is no upper limit to the number of nominations. It is not necessary to obtain the approval of the nomination from the candidate for the award at the stage of making the nomination. Self-nominations will not be accepted.

1) Heads of Japanese and foreign universities (including heads of faculties, graduate schools, research institutes, and other departments).

2) Heads of Inter-University Research Institutes

3) Heads of academic associations and research institutions in Japan and abroad.

6. How to nominate

For each candidate for the award, please fill in the Nomination Form (separate form) should be prepared and sent by post or e-mail in the name of the head of the university or other institution who is the nominating authority to “11. Where to submit the nomination documents”.

* Please use either Form 1 (Japanese version) or Form 2 (English version) for the recommendation form.

7. Deadline

Wednesday, June 26, 2024

By postal mail: Wednesday, June 26, 2024 (postmarked)

By email: No later than Wednesday, June 26 17:00, 2024 (JST)

8. Selection and notification of the result

Around September 2024, nominees for the prize will be selected by the International Prize in Japanese Studies Selection Committee, which will be set up in NIHU, and the results of the selection will be sent to the organizations that submitted nominees for the prize.

The result of the selection will be published on the website of NIHU after confirming whether the laureate has accepted the prize.

Even where multiple organizations nominate an identical nominee, the selection of a laureate will be made strictly by the committee based on the contents of each nomination document, without considering the number of nomination documents.

9. Presentation ceremony and commemorative lecture meeting

The prize presentation ceremony and commemorative lecture meeting are planned to be held around December 2024.

10. Others

- 1) No change or addition to the information provided in the nomination documents will be accepted after they are submitted.
